Market Profile Is Not an Indicator

- 1). It is a market auction framework
- 2). It shows where price found acceptance
- 3). It reveals where price was rejected
- 4). It helps identify fair value and imbalance
- 5). It explains who is in control

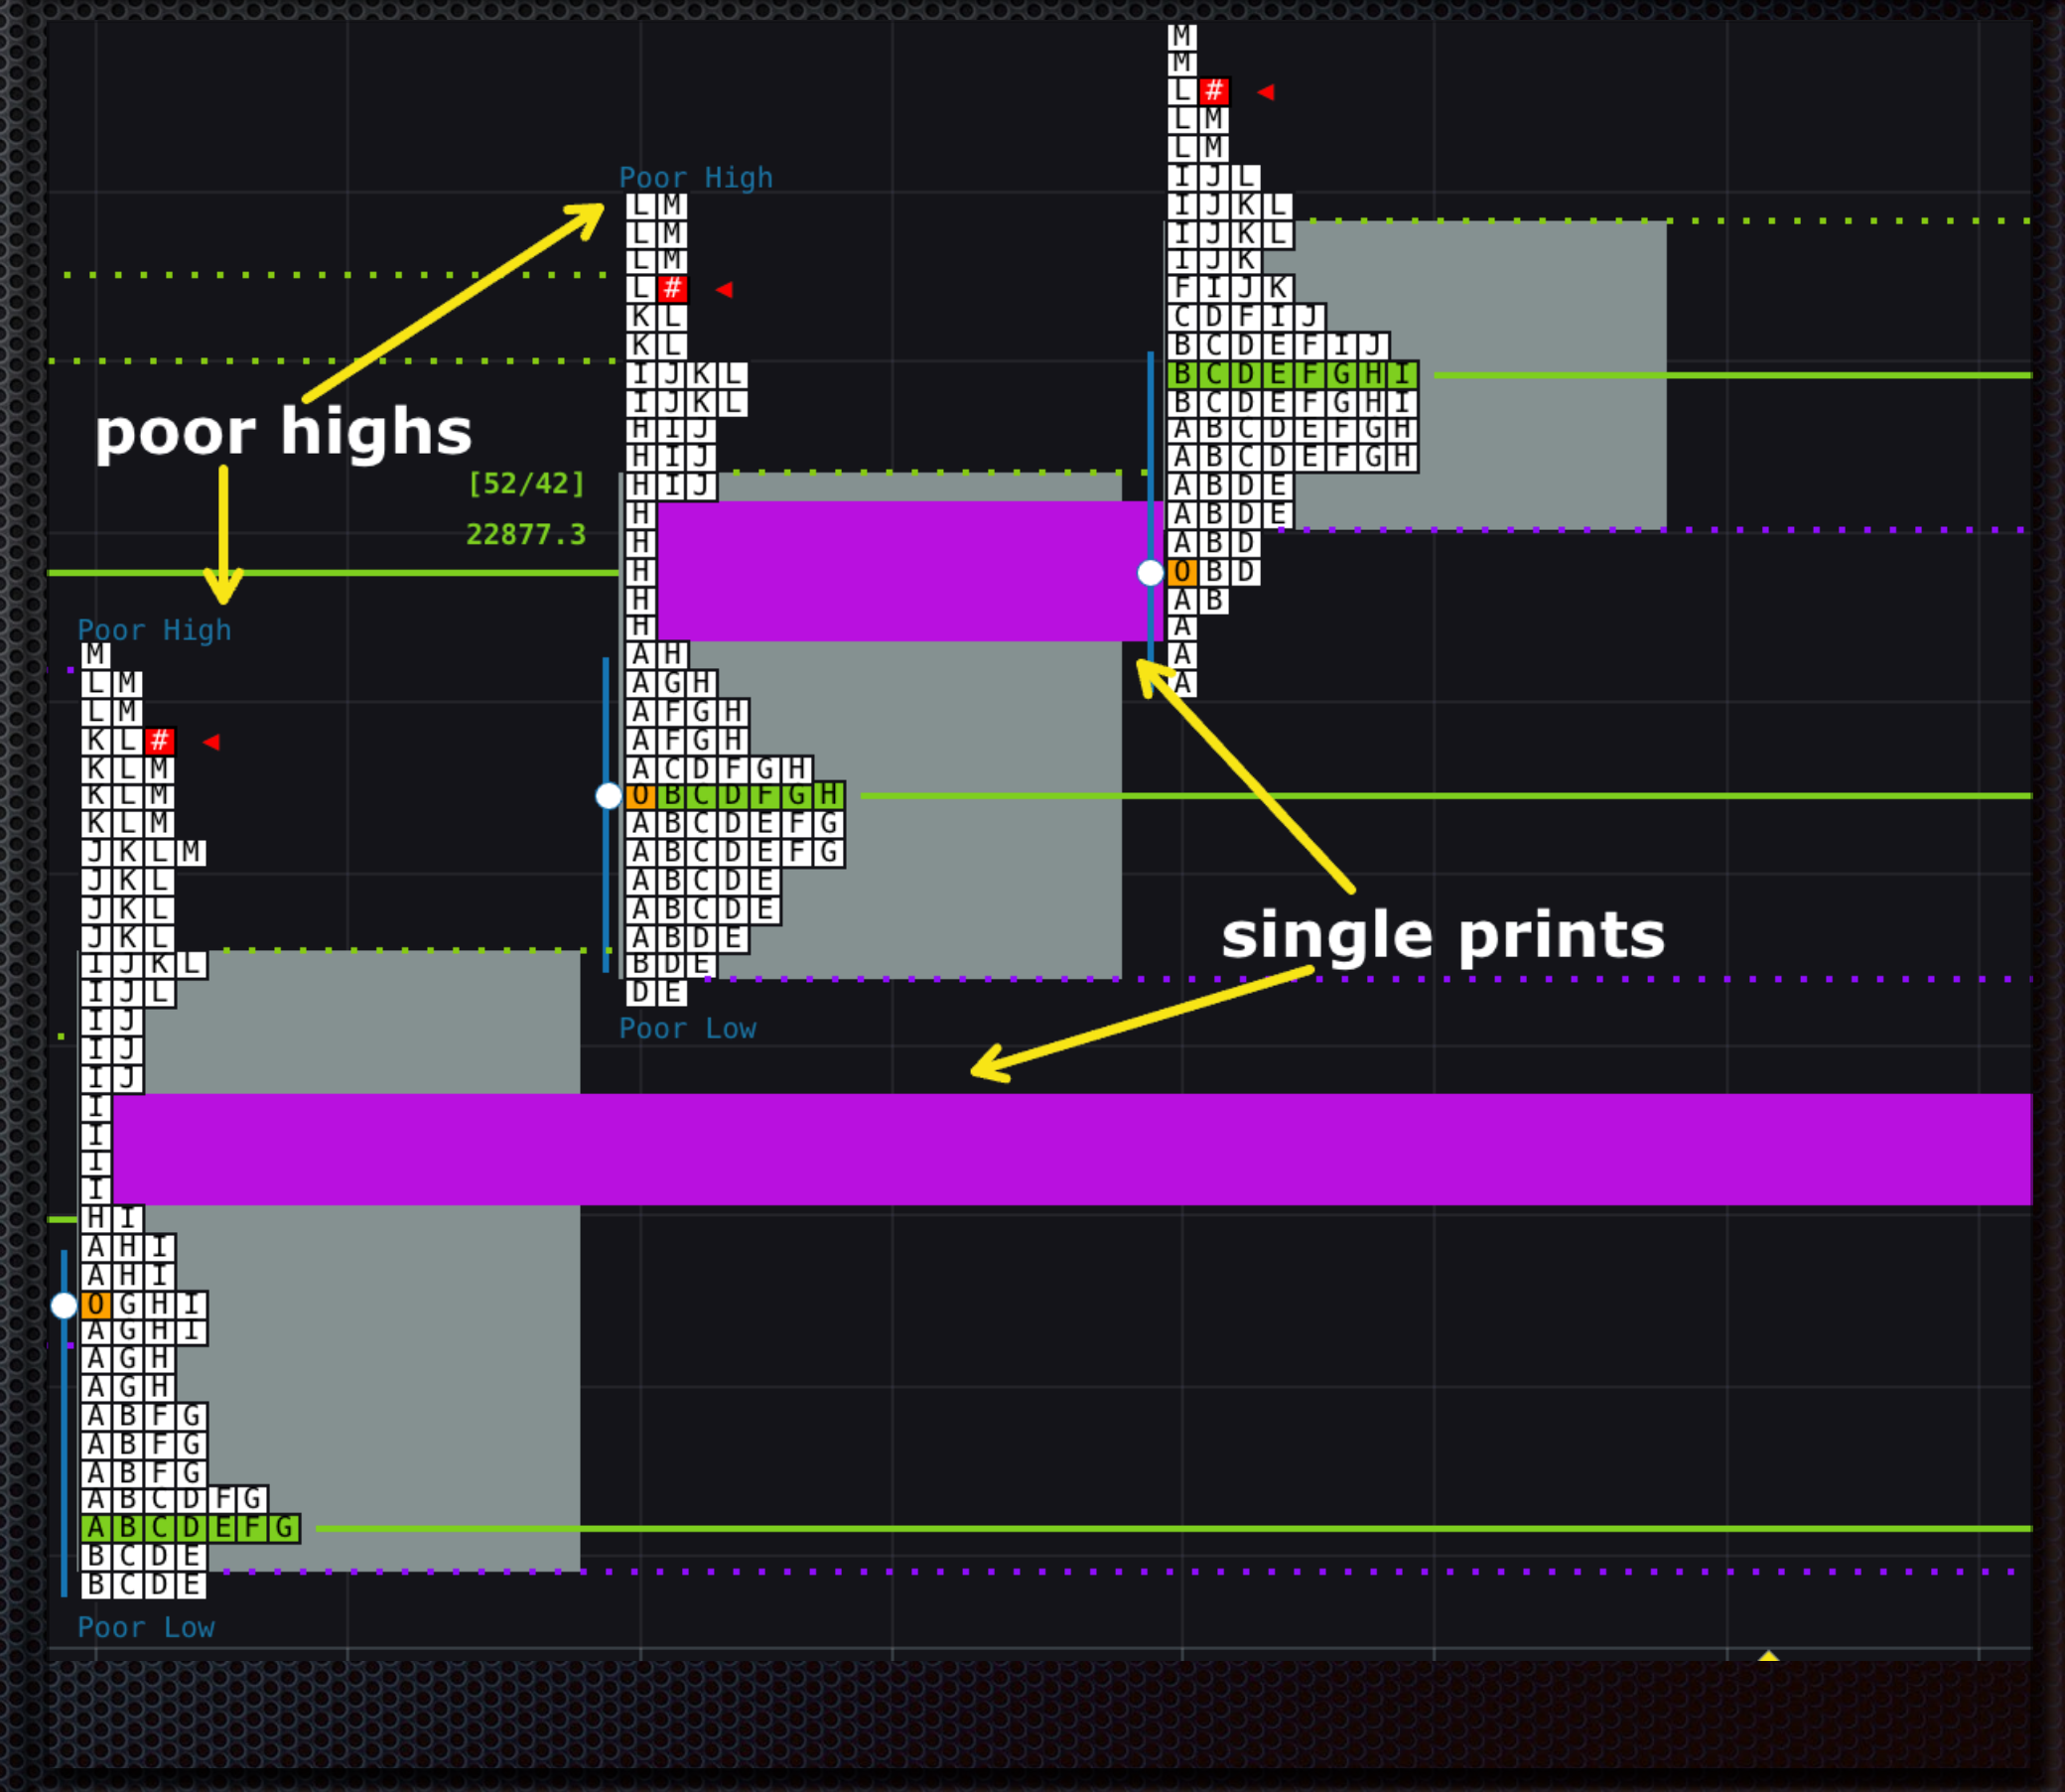

The 4 Core Levels

- 1). POC → Point of Control
- 2). VAH → Value Area High
- 3). VAL → Value Area Low
- 4). IB → Initial Balance
- 5). These levels create trading context

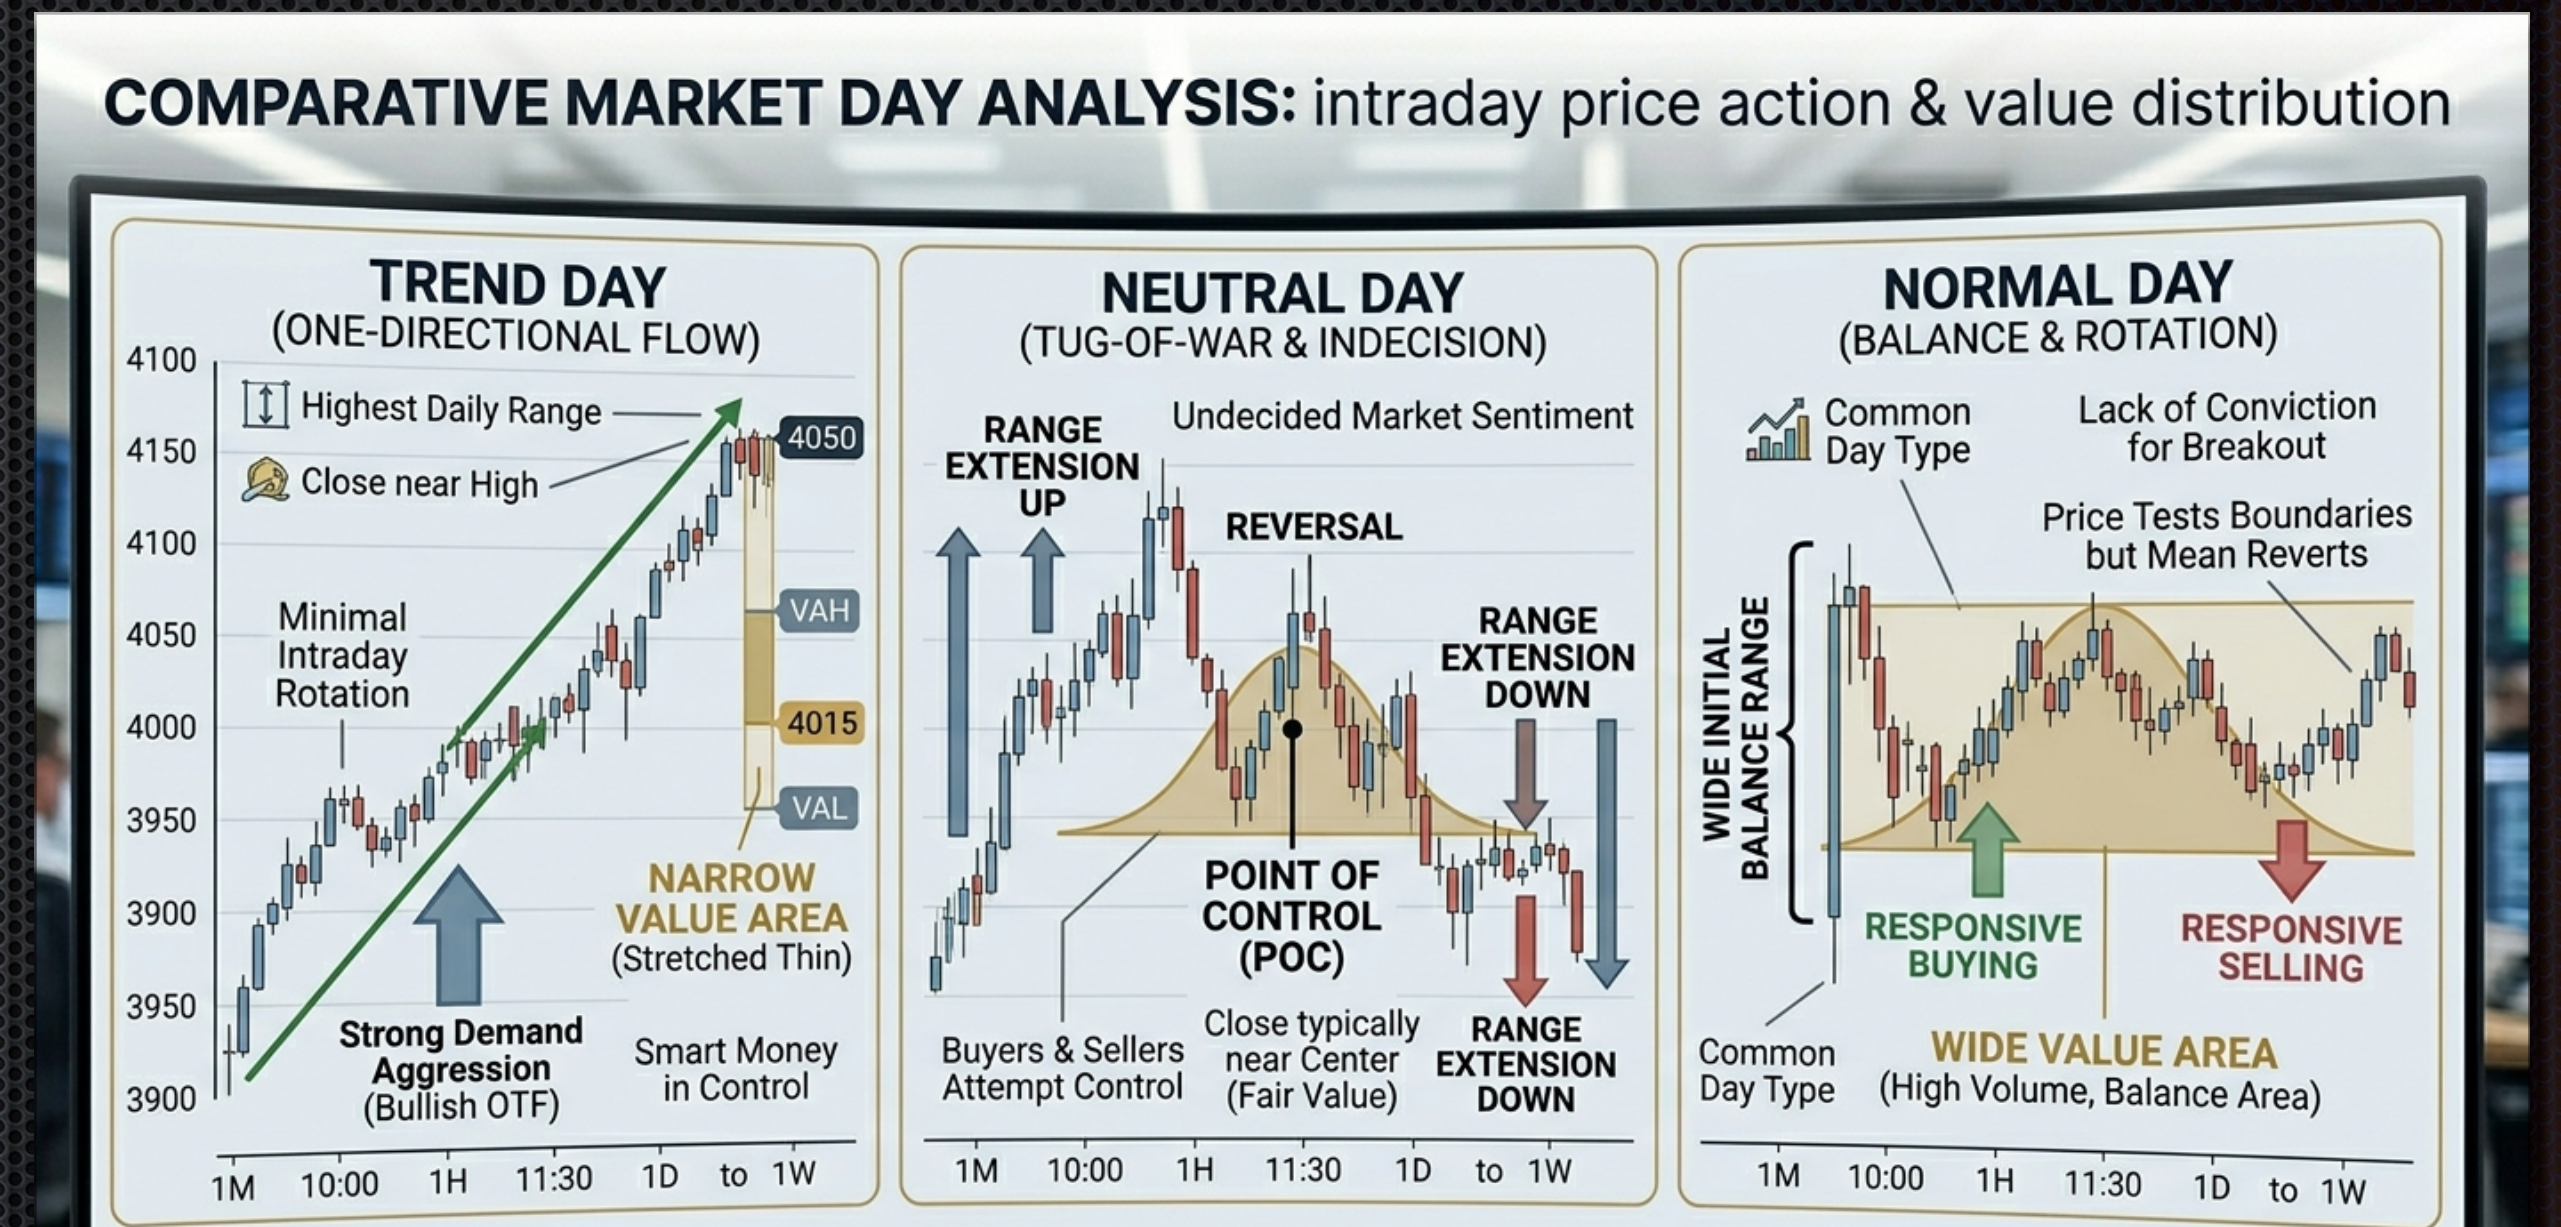

Signs of Aggression and Weakness

- 1). Single Prints show fast rejection
- 2). Strong directional conviction
- 3). Poor Highs show unfinished auction
- 4). Poor Lows attract revisits
- 5). Weak structure gets repaired

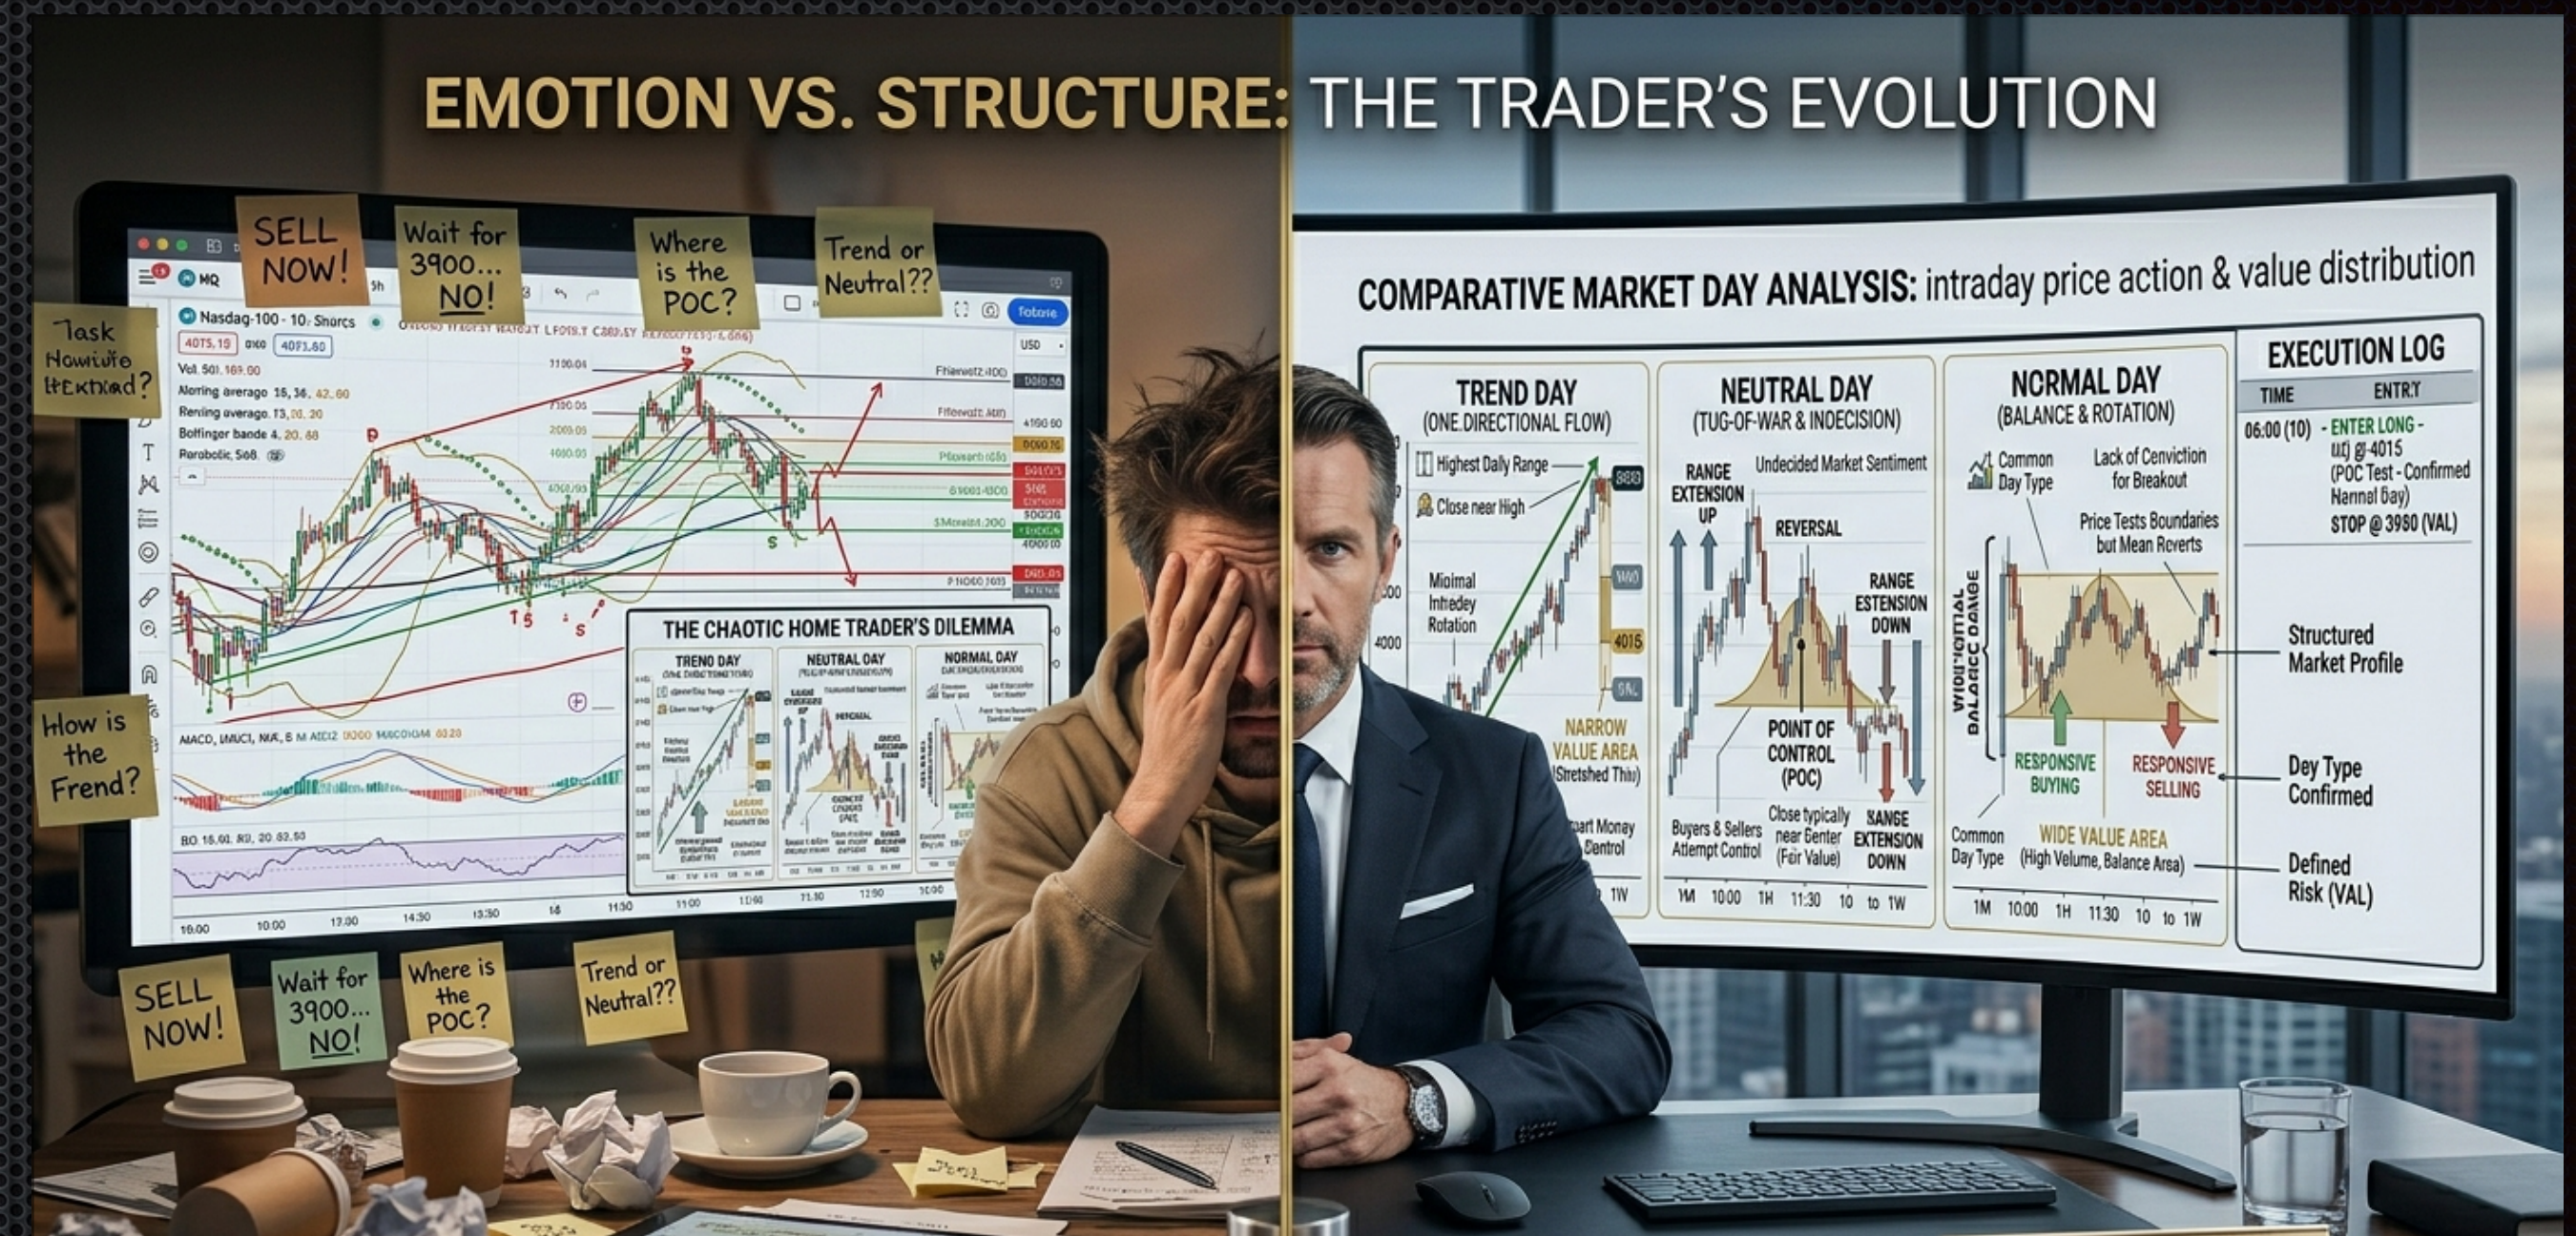

Not Every Day Trades the Same

- 1). Trend Day → strong continuation
- 2). Neutral Day → both sides active
- 3). Normal Day → balanced session
- 4). Open type changes expectations
- 5). Day type defines execution style

What Most Traders Do Wrong

- 1). Blindly trading POC
- 2). Trading every VAH/VAL touch
- 3). Ignoring higher timeframe context
- 4). No liquidity confirmation
- 5). Levels without behavior understanding

Professionals Ask Better Questions

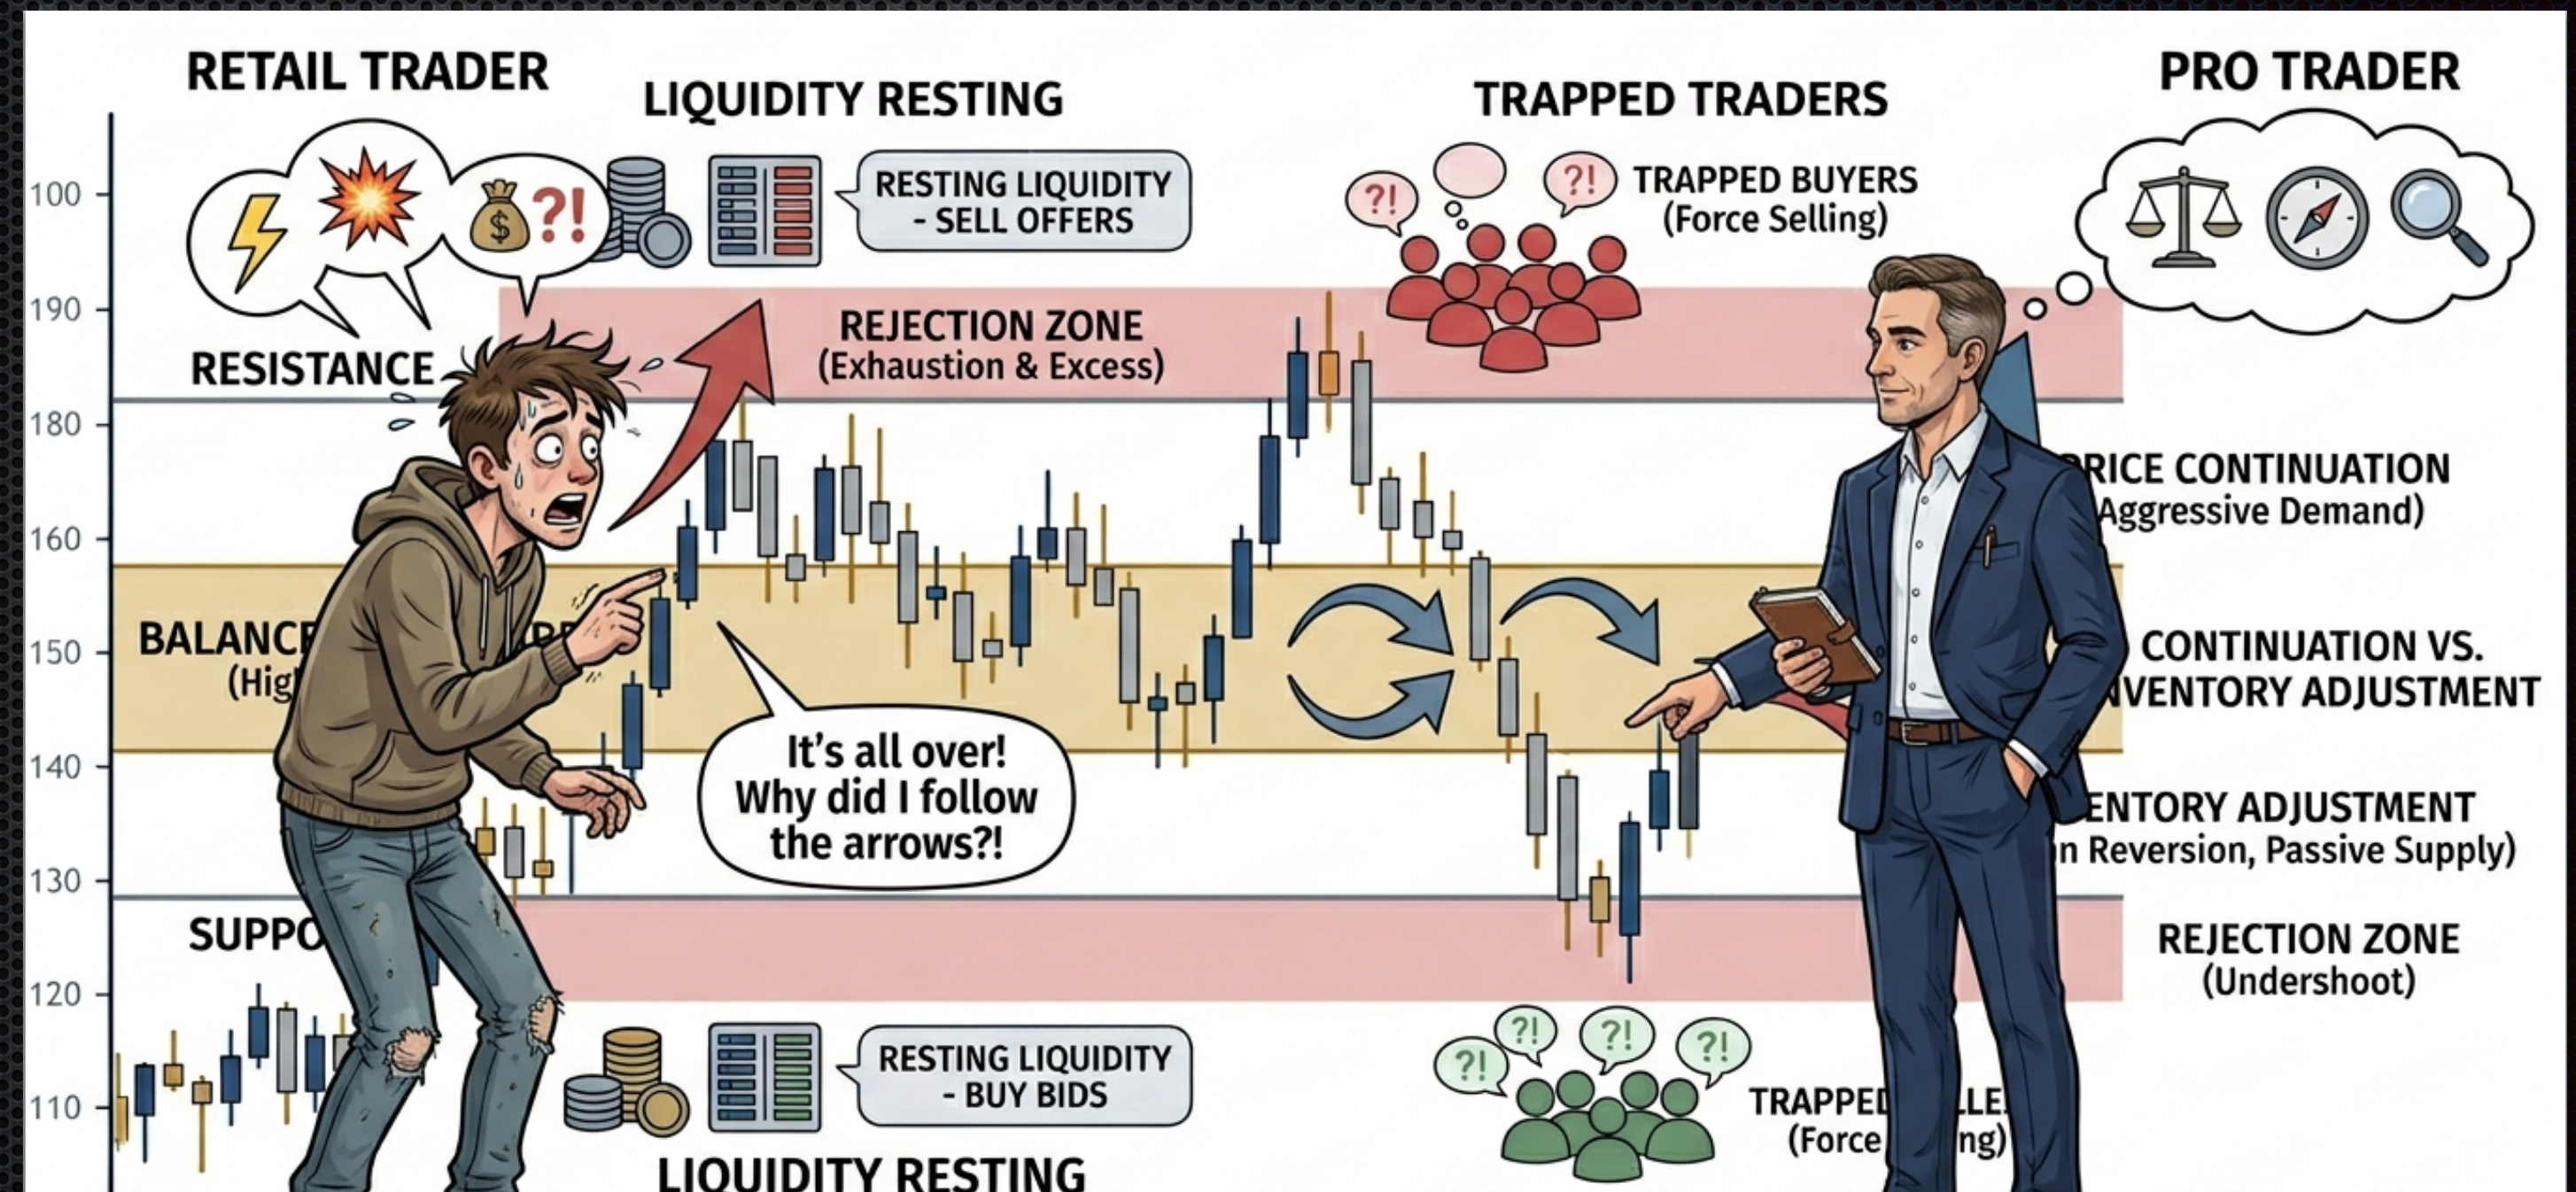

1). Is price accepting or rejecting?

2). Where is liquidity resting?

3). Who is trapped here?

4). Continuation or inventory adjustment?

5). What is the market trying to complete?

Do Not Trade Levels

Trade Behavior Around Levels

1). Levels are context, not signals

2). Response matters more than location

3). Execution comes after confirmation

4). Liquidity explains movement

5). Preparation beats prediction

I DON'T TEACH SETUPS. I BUILD DECISION-MAKING TRADERS.

For years, I've helped traders move beyond random entries and emotional decisions by building one complete framework around:

- a). Market Profile
- b). Order Flow
- c). Momentum
- d). Trading Psychology

This is not theory.

It is a practical system used across real market conditions in all segments.
